

AccuRx

AccuRx is used by GPs so that they can see a patient via video.

You will need a smartphone with a camera or a computer with a camera to use it.

Your GP will arrange the video appointment with you in advance and send you a link by email or text message.

If your GP would like you to take a photograph they will also request this by text or email.

How to have a doctor's appointment by video

1. If your doctor decides that they want to see you via video, they will send you a link by text or by email. When you click on the link it will automatically open the internet browser on your phone or computer.

4. You may see another screen where you need to click on 'Request permissions' to enable your camera and your microphone.

5. You should then be able to see your doctor and continue with your consultation.

6. Your doctor will end the call.
